Please note:
 Both the domains of Family and Safety have outcomes differentiated by colour which denotes outcomes targeting different cohorts. For the Family domain, the first set of darker green outcomes relate to those experienced by parents/caregivers, with the second set in lighter green being outcomes experienced by children and young people. In the Safety domain, the first set in yellow are outcomes relevant to a wide range of cohorts, and the second light yellow set relating only to outcomes experienced by perpetrators of family violence. In the Justice domain, the darker green tone denotes outcomes that apply to all groups, while the different colour variations highlight particular cohorts, first, victims of crime, and then offenders.
